ALL-WEATHER CANTER COMING UP

Undismayed by snow, sleet, cold or heat, this father-and-daughter team can be seen each day taking a constitutional canter in the KLO Road district. Reginald and Edith Lumsden rarely miss a day. They find that their mounts enjoy the outing as much as they do, no matter what the thermometer says, and the exercise keeps them fit.

H. G. Wells Strikes Again But It's Only A Recording

By DOUG MacDONALD
Courier Staff

A cold shiver ran down Shirley Johnson's spine Monday night as a panicky radio announcer told of an invasion of the United States by aliens from Mars.

"New York is in flames. Lines with Washington are out," the shaking voice said.

A local radio announcer interrupted: "Central and Western Canada and the Northwestern United States are in no immediate danger."

Earlier, there had been an announcement that astronomers were watching Mars after spotting some "strange eruptions" on the planet's surface.

There were no aliens. The dramatic description of the destruction of much of the continent by aliens was a ghost from radio's past—the famous Orson Wells broadcast of Halloween night, 1938, in which the Mercury Theatre panicked thousands of American citizens.

But Miss Johnson didn't know this; neither did at least 34 other Kelowna residents who phoned police and civil defence organization to find out what was going on. Is there an invasion? Is it really the Russians? What will happen to Kelowna?

"The program scared the living daylight out of me," the young receptionist for Sun-Rype Products Ltd., said. "I was at a girl-friend's place; her husband and three children were with us, and we were all really panicked for a while."

She said she and her friends were unsure whether the invasion was a hoax until the local announcer mentioned Canada and the northwestern states. "Then I thought maybe it was the Russians, and they were only saying it was Martians."

She was one of 34 people who had telephoned the RCMP before the program was half an hour in progress.

Police said the callers' reactions varied from nervousness to panic. The members on duty called Sgt. Robert Sault at home, who tuned in the last part of the program himself.

Press Leak Raises Ire In Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee resumed work on its wiretapping report today with at least one member angry that its first decision—to give final authority on police wiretapping to judges—was leaked to the press.

Terrence Murphy (L-Sault Ste. Marie) called a news conference to say he will move that the committee hold public rather than private meetings while drafting its report.

Mr. Murphy said someone on the 20-man committee "spilled" the whole draft report late last week, including the contentious decision to make judges responsible for issuing wiretap permits to police.

The MP said that if the results of each meeting are to be leaked, the meetings should be open to reporters so all members could get their views on record.

The committee's first decision was at odds with the views of Justice Minister John Turner, who said last summer that attorneys-general should make the decisions.

Mr. Murphy was among the committee members who supported the Turner position.

Elidon Woolliams (PC—Cangary North) argued it would be dangerous to put such power in the hands of attorneys-general, who he said are political animals. They represented the Crown against the individual and shouldn't be entrusted with such an important civil right.

Abductor Still Hunted

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP in suburban Surrey said Monday they are still pressing the hunt for the abductor of seven-year-old Evangeline Azareon whose body was found a week ago in a Surrey swamp.

Evangeline disappeared on her way home from school in Vancouver last Nov. 20.

Police have issued appeals to anyone with any knowledge of the case to contact them.

Vancouver police said Monday no application has been received for a $1,000 reward posted by the City of Vancouver for finding the girl.

Her body was found by police but an unidentified Surrey farmer, who found her lunch-bucket in the swamp while he was checking on drainage there, led to the discovery.

Meanwhile, it was learned from a friend of the Azareon family that Evangeline's body will be sent to the Philippines for burial. The family came from the Philippines two years ago.

A medical examination revealed the girl had been criminally assaulted and subsequently died either from drowning or from choking on her stomach contents.

Parents Must Pay For Junior's Pranks

MADISON HEIGHTS, Mich. (AP) — A new city ordinance will give parents in the Detroit suburb of Madison Heights legal responsibility for crimes committed by their minor children.

It provides that the parents of a minor child who commits two or more crimes in a 12-month period are subject to a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Some Thought Is Was Fact...

"Some residents were concerned it was actually occurring," Sgt. Sault said. Police did not release the names of the callers.

CKOV radio station owner James Brown Jr., said today he was surprised at the amount of reaction to the broadcast, which ran from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m.

"It wasn't done to shock anyone; obviously some people were upset by it."

Minimum Wage Raised In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 2,100,000 lower-paid U.S. workers next week will get a raise in the federal minimum wage to $1.45 from $1.30 an hour. The increase, effective Feb. 1, applies to workers in laundries, dry cleaners, hotels, motels, restaurants, schools, non-federal hospitals and nursing homes and other smaller retail or service establishments.

The program, he explained, could be found by anyone—it was taken from the original CBS broadcast of 1938 and is available in local record shops. It was based on the science-fiction book written by H. G. Wells.

"I thought more people would have been aware of what it was; the Orson Wells broadcast is famous and the book is required reading on B.C. secondary school English curricula," the station owner said.

In fact, many people did recognize the husky Orson Wells voice; a few had heard the original broadcast.

Bob Gourlay, the CKOV announcer who presented the program as part of a regular rock music show, was still shaking his head today at the reaction.

"The phones went crazy, and the reactions were of all sorts. Some kids thought it was well done and really interesting."

"Some people were ready to tar and feather me."

Nixon Vetoes Big Money Bill

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — In his first veto since assuming office, President Nixon Monday night tossed back to Congress a money bill that would have provided nearly $20,000,000,000 for health, education and welfare.

Nixon signed the veto at the end of a short television address and explained he was blocking the measure—which included a $1,300,000,000 increase added by Congress—because it would jeopardize his battle against inflation.

"I believe that the increase is not in the best interests of the American people," explained the president. "I believe it is the wrong amount, for the wrong purpose, at the wrong time."

Supporters of the $19,700,000,000 appropriation for the department of health, education and welfare would need to muster a two-thirds majority in both the House of Representatives and Senate to override the veto.

Although congressional observers figured the Senate with its 57 Democrats and 43 Republicans probably would block the veto, its fate is less certain in the lower chamber, where there are 245 Democrats and 188 Republicans. Two seats are vacant.

The House votes first, and if it lets the veto stand, the matter will not go to the Senate.

CUTS ARE MUST

Noting that other federal departments, including defence, had made budget cuts for 1970, Nixon said that "if we are to stop the rise in the cost of living... we have to cut spending by the federal government."

It was his first veto since assuming the presidency last year, and the first veto any president has signed before a television audience.

Nixon promised that if Congress sustained his veto, he would work with it "to ease the transition to reform without inflation."

He said his veto would be unpopular in an election year, with many congressional seats up in November, but he said he had to consider the best interests of the U.S. as a whole.

"We spend more on education than any country on earth, but we can spend ourselves poor," he said. "Therefore, no matter how popular it is, if it raises your prices I will not approve it."

Special Relationship Urged By Wilson For Britain, U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson says he came to the United States to explore with President Nixon how to create a better life for the world's people—not to find ways to more power.

The British leader, whose first of two days of meetings with Nixon was scheduled today, said Monday the times demand a re-casting of the "special relationship" that has bound the two nations in this century.

"It will be in no inward-looking or purely bilateral sense we shall discuss the special relationship I have called for," Wilson told an audience in New York before arriving in Washington. He flew to New York from Ottawa where he held talks with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"For unlike what some feared about our special relationship in the past, we seek not to be exclusive in our dealings but to join with others in a common endeavor to solve the problems of human society."

Although Wilson said the over-coming of social evils will dominate the talks, diplomatic sources indicated the discussions just might cover the more worldly matters of international conflicts and economic problems.

FEAR BUDGET PRESSURES

In fact, the sources said this afternoon's session was arranged because of London's fear that Nixon's budget-lightening moves might set off a recession, which in turn could hurt the British economy.

And it would be difficult for Nixon and Wilson to avoid discussing such common points of international concern as the Middle East, North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Vietnam and East-West relations in general.

Private 'Free-Booters' Aided By Socreds Claims Barrett

VICTORIA (CP) — Opposition Leader David Barrett attacked the government in the legislature Monday for supporting "free-booting private enterprise."

He said it did not state that while ignoring soaring electricity rates, the plight of those on welfare, and starving B.C. already has the highest electricity rates for home users, Mr. Barrett said, adding that the increase of about 15 per cent forecast for April 1 by B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum would contribute to inflation.

He said Vancouver and Victoria residents pay twice as much for their power as Ottawa residents, one third more than Winnipeg residents, and one quarter more than those who live in Edmonton. The only major city paying more for power in the 1,000 kilowatt-hour range was Regina.

Mr. Barrett said the blame for excessive electricity rates in B.C. must be taken by the government because "politics had interfered with every decision affecting hydro in this province."

In taking issue with the government attitude on welfare, Mr. Barrett cited a statement in the throne speech which said more B.C. residents than ever before were employed.

He said it did not state that there were also more unemployed and that "well over 100,000" are receiving social assistance—more than ever before.

The opposition leader criticized Welfare Minister Philip Gagliardi for his recent suggestion that many welfare recipients were "deadbeats" and said that 49,000 children who are supported by welfare in the province cannot be described as deadbeats but as individuals who "haven't even had a chance at life."

Mr. Barrett also urged government to contribute a portion of the province's $25,000,000 major disaster fund to B.C. relief.

"The federal government has shown a singular lack of interest in the plight of B.C.," he said. "I believe that no member of this house would oppose the immediate granting of funds to the Nigerian government or the International Red Cross. We must wait for Ottawa."

Help Given To Candidates

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said Monday the government is doing nothing to bring air pollution under control in B.C.

"Nor is it prepared to," he said.

Replying to the government's throne speech, Mr. McGeer also called for a ban on all government department advertising during election campaigns.

Claiming "hundreds of thousands of dollars" in government advertising went to help government candidates in the provincial election last August, the Liberal leader also said Vancouver Advertiser M. J. O'Brien, who ran personally sponsored newspaper notices supporting Social Credit before the election got "the B.C. Hydro account" after the election.

"This man with his personal ads," said Dr. McGeer. "Don't anybody think he paid for it out of his own pocket... he was after the B.C. Hydro account."

"He paid for it and he got it," Dr. McGeer said.

Attorney General Leslie Peterson shouted across the house: "Are you prepared to make this statement outside the house?"

Dr. McGeer, displaying several file folders filled with newspaper clippings, said they were the public's money being used for your election campaign.

"This is what you took out of the public purse to get yourself re-elected."

KELOWNA COUNCIL DIVIDED

The Return Of Jack Brow...

Jack Brow is on the Kelowna city payroll again.

The ex-recreation director whose dismissal last year threw the 1969 council into a political whirlwind, was officially "re-hired" by the 1970 council Monday. His job will be as "instructor of sports and fitness."

The decision was made on a split vote, with Ald. M. J. Peters, Ald. Richard Stewart and Ald. Alan Moss fighting the last vote to table the hiring.

They said the city should at least wait until a new parks and recreation director is hired before re-instating Mr. Brow.

Mr. Brow's dismissal last August brought an immediate public furor and a strong lobby to have him re-hired. Mayor Hilbert Roth, then an alderman, promised to attempt to have this done, but council turned this down and called for a complete review of the parks and recreation department.

P. S. Ross and Partners, a Vancouver consultant firm, set out to find a parks and recreation director as part of their study of the entire city administration.

JACK BROW makes comeback

to the re-hiring at this time of Mr. Brow.

Ald. Peters charged the consultants are being hindered in their hiring of a recreation director by the fact Mr. Brow will be re-hired. He said Ross partner Jack Currie told him in Vernon last week that "two of the top applicants" from among 37 for the job, had dropped out.

The consultants, he said, are under the impression that Mr. Brow's re-hiring will be a condition of employment for the new recreation director.

"I would like to know who flagrantly corrupted what the council had said," challenged Ald. Moss. "I would like to know who had the right to inform the consultants that a condition of employment for the recreation director would be re-hiring Jack Brow."

He also predicted "staff resignations" within the department, but did not elaborate.

His comments brought charges he was "making insinuations" from Mayor Roth. Ald. Peters "pleaded with" Mayor Roth and Ald. Gwen Holdirector was hired.

But Ald. Holland pointed out there is an "emergency situation" requiring immediate attention of a qualified recreation man to keep the department's programs going.

JUST TEACH...
"All we are requesting is that Mr. Brow be a teacher," she said. "If he doesn't abide by the parks and recreation policy, then he will be fired; but in the meantime, we have to keep our programs going."

Ald. Moss and Ald. Peters refused to accept the validity of the "emergency situation". Ald. Peters listed a large increase in recreation programs offered since Mr. Brow's dismissal.

Ald. Peters went on to accuse Mayor Roth of "deliberately picking" a new parks and recreation commissioner whose members were in favor of re-hiring Mr. Brow. All but one of the commission at the time of the dismissal refused to stand for re-appointment.

Workers at hospitals in Kamloops, Prince George and Trail have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action to back contract demands, Ray McCready, business manager of the Hospital Employees Union, said Monday in Vancouver.

Thousands of students battled 1,500 riot police and hurled bottles, stones and a wooden coffin at President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his wife outside the Philippines Congress in Manila. Scores of demonstrators and police were reported injured in the two-hour clash that ebbed to sporadic fights near the presidential palace about 300 yards away.

Nearly $1,000,000 in financial assistance has been paid to victims of the flood at Trail, last April 23, Ray Williston, resources minister and chairman of the province's major disaster fund committee, said Monday in Victoria.

Police in Cranbrook have laid a charge of rape against David V. Atherton of Cranbrook following an attack on a 14-year-old girl.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said in Ottawa Monday the government is aiming at announcing new dairy policy "a few days before April 1."

Notice of a motion to have a printed record of legislative debates has been given by Gordon Dowling (NDP Burnaby-Edmonds) for today's sitting of the legislature in Victoria. The motion is not likely to make any headway because Premier Bennett as government leader can determine the order of business. He has consistently opposed a written record favoring tape recordings.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp assured the Commons Monday that the government considers women and men equal. Mr. Sharp said he hoped the Vatican would change such a policy.

A charge against former police constable Peter Lott of failing to appear Jan. 5 at the Metropolitan Toronto police commission inquiry was dismissed Monday. Lott's allegations that senior police officials threw out charges of impaired driving against influential persons sparked the inquiry. A subpoena was issued for his arrest when he didn't show up at the hearing. He turned himself in more than a week later.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien says in Toronto the federal government has no intention of forcing Canada's Indians to accept its controversial proposals for changing their status in Canadian society. "Much of the Indian reaction to the proposals has been based on fear and misunderstanding," Mr. Chretien said in a letter to The Star.

Judge's Job Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The labor-revival rights alliance that helped defeat President Nixon's last U.S. Supreme Court nomination has joined again to oppose his appointment of Judge G. Harold Carswell to the high court.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, speaking out on the eve of today's opening of Senate hearings on the nomination, said Carswell "does not meet the high standards requisite for Supreme Court membership."

Senator William Proxmire also fired a broadside at the 50-year-old judge in a speech prepared for delivery to the Senate today. The Wisconsin Democrat said Carswell was a judge whose credentials "are distinguished by their mediocrity."

Civil rights groups already were on record with strong opposition to Carswell. They fought his nomination when he was elevated to the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans last June.

Critics of the nomination were armed with the disclosures that Carswell gave a political speech in 1948 pledging life-long devotion to white supremacy and that while U.S. attorney for northern Florida he served as a director of a segregated country club.

The American Bar Association came out in support of Carswell. Lawrence E. Walsh, chairman of the bar's committee on the federal judiciary, said its members were unanimous in the opinion the nominee is qualified.

IT WAS I . . .

A conflict developed Monday over just who did act as prime minister when Sir Winston Churchill was incapacitated by illness in 1953. Lord Butler, above, the former Conservative foreign secretary R. A. Butler, emerged from his scholarly retreat at Cambridge University to contest the claim that Christopher Soames, Churchill's son-in-law, secretly acted as prime minister and instructed the cabinet in Churchill's name. Butler, now Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, where Prince Charles is a student, said in a published interview that he, not Soames, was the man at the helm of government while Churchill was unable to make decisions.

KELOWNA COUNCIL

Speak In Open Says Alderman

The Kelowna city council is doing too much in committee (private) and not enough in open council, one of its members said Monday night. Ald. S. A. Hodge, in his first month of a two-year term, asked who decided what went on the committee agenda and what went into open council. City clerk James Hudson said all items went first to the staff administration committee, which meets each Thursday, prior to the regular Monday council meetings. Ald. Hodge said some items must, in the public interest, be discussed privately, but many others should go into open council. He said after the meeting that Monday afternoon's committee meeting lasted longer than the evening open session and at one point the council spent 15 minutes discussing a $10 matter. Mayor Hilbert Roth agreed with Ald. Hodge's points and said consideration would be given in future to bringing more council business into open council.

The council is still not happy with response to its request for greater say in affairs of the Regional District of Central Okanagan, of which it is a major part. The council, through its regional district representatives, last week asked the district to consider giving Kelowna greater voting power. The city currently has one vote for every 5,000 population (four votes), but seeks one vote for every 2,000 people. The district said the situation wouldn't be reviewed until 1971 at the earliest, but the council agreed Monday to continue seeking more say in regional affairs: the most value possible for city residents, was the way Ald. W. J. C. Kane put it.

Ald. Kane also expressed concern about provincial government plans to combat air pollution and again voiced apprehension about the possible location of a pulp mill in the Okanagan. On air pollution he asked the government to be more specific about its control plans. He suggested control would be difficult with municipal controls, unless the government had found a way to control the wind. On pulp mills he said the council should oppose any industry which would be a heavy user of water. Ald. Alan Moss said Okanagan Lake would not support a pulp mill.

Mayor Roth reported R. G. Whillis has resigned as chairman of the local 1971 centennial celebrations committee because of a "conflict of business interests," and is being replaced by Gordon Hartley.

The Kelowna Little Theatre has been given permission to use a two-horse team and wagon to promote its Feb. 19 to 21 production of The Death and Life of Sneaky Fitch. The team will be displayed downtown in the morning and afternoon of Feb. 14.

The Kelowna Yacht Club was given permission for its executive to consider an annual dues increase to $35 from $25 at the annual meeting Feb. 11. Council permission was required under terms of the club's by-law.

Council was told the Grace Baptist Church, on the north side of Bernard Avenue, between Bertram Street and Richmond Street is for sale for $265,000. Agents handling the sale wondered if the city would be interested in negotiating for the property, but the council decided it wasn't.

CD Meeting Not Wanted

By a 6-1 vote the council decided it didn't want to take half an hour to listen to a civil defence talk by Kamloops zone CD co-ordinator G. E. Hutchinson. Ald. Hodge said there are many demands on the council's time. He wasn't critical of CD's efforts, as this is one of his departments, but he felt he could spend the time with Mr. Hutchinson, then report to council if necessary. Ald. Moss disagreed, saying he was certainly prepared to take the half hour talk, but he was outvoted 6-1.

The third Kelowna Cub Pack was given permission to conduct a bottle drive Feb. 7. At the same time council turned over to senior staff and in future staff will have authorization to approve such drives and they will not go to council. This involves bottle drives only, by Kelowna organizations and requests for permission for other drives and appeals will still go to council.

Ald. Richard Stewart was named acting mayor for February, to represent the council and city at various civic functions.

Donald Wilson, senior guidance council president from Kelowna Secondary School thanked the council for inviting students to the 1970 council inaugural meeting, Jan. 5.

Representatives of a Calgary parking meter firm were due in Kelowna for a private meeting with council this afternoon. Mayor Hilbert Roth said the council might hear submissions from several meter firms and

Mr. Trudeau already is scheduled to visit Yellowknife Monday, March 9, for the opening of the Arctic Winter Games.

Israel Happy, Arabs Furious At Nixon's Arms Decision

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli Premier Golda Meir has welcomed President Nixon's pledge to maintain the arms balance in the Middle East by selling weapons to Israel. The Arab press called for reprisals against U.S. interests in the Middle East.

Mrs. Meir in a communique said the president's message to a conference of Jewish leaders in Washington Sunday "gives eloquent expression to the United States' friendship for Israel."

Nixon said his government was "maintaining careful watch on the relative strength of the forces in the Middle East, and we will not hesitate to provide arms to friendly states as the need arises."

The Cairo press criticized it as "the most hostile U.S. attitude yet toward the Arabs."

The semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram said it appeared to be "a prelude for providing the Israeli militarists with more Skyhawk and Phantom warplanes than the 75 original requested last year."

TRYING THWART FRANCE
Al-Ahram said the United States was "trying to force France to cancel its agreement to sell Libya 100 jet fighters."

"The decision facing the Arabs in their battle of destiny can no longer be avoided," said Beirut's Al-Rayah. "American interests in the Arab world must be attacked." Other newspapers likened Nixon's message to the Balfour Declaration which in 1917 pledged Britain's support for a national home in Palestine for the Jews.

The Syrian government's official news paper Al-Thawra, said:

"Only the language of the arms will be understood by the Arab masses."

In Bern, the Swiss capital the Swiss government announced seizure of a "substantial quantity" of spare parts en route to Israel for military aircraft.

The Situation In Biafra Is Now Becoming Clear

Last week most people wondered whom they could believe about the situation in Biafra. Now, however, the situation is becoming clear and it is evident that the rosy picture painted by less experienced observers and officials was erroneous. Many people had suspected that the official observers who went into Biafran territory just after the ceasefire had not appreciated the magnitude of the suffering nor the need to bring speedy relief. It is distressing that the optimism given by the official observers should have sounded so assured. The warnings given by those who flew out at the end of the war that massive relief was needed within 72 hours now appear to have been well-founded. The on-the-spot reports appear to go a long way to call in question what now seem to have been over-complacent statements made by, among others, U Thant, the international observer team and our own Robert Thompson. It is clear they were led down the garden path and food and medical supplies are desperately short, either because it is not being distributed properly or because it is not there at all.

What is the whole truth about Biafra today? Only a fool would claim to know it. Conditions may well be better in other parts of Biafra but what 80 experienced newsmen saw in one area must raise fears that there are other pockets of intense suffering. From the confusion two facts emerge. First, starvation does exist although there is division of view about its extent. Secondly, the optimism concerning Nigeria's capacity to deal with the situation has not been justified.

Fortunately, the Nigerian government appears to have recognized this in part at least and has asked for trucks to be rushed to the area. This is now being done by the plane-load. Some airfields have been opened up but if Nigeria wishes to demonstrate that it is a civilized nation, capable and willing to avert a horrible tragedy, then there is one thing it must do quickly: open up the Uli airstrip. For this is the only quick way into the stricken heartland of what was once the state of Biafra.

It is now clear, beyond any doubt, that the Nigerian government, however well intentioned, does not have the job of relief in hand. A great number of refugees who are in urgent need of relief are not getting it. Children are often the worst casualties of war and famine everywhere and Biafra was, as everyone knows, no exception. Once again it must be said that Uli is the obvious entry point for such rescue work. It is not unfair to ask Lagos to swallow its understandable pride and allow the use of the Uli airstrip. Especially now that it can be seen that the government's own efforts are proving unable of coping with the problems quickly, and speed is the essence.

To pretend that things are not too bad, as U Thant, Robert Thompson and others have said, is to blur the facts. We want to encourage Nigerian leaders to behave with the generosity which they have promised and have begun to show. But however great the difficulties they face, it does them no service to hide our anxieties about the efficiency and vigor of the relief effort.

Spoiling Our Woods

(Victoria Colonist)

Exasperated logging operators, suffering heavy losses every year through theft and vandalism, could hardly be criticized if they closed their roads to public access—something they have a right to do.

Last year one big Vancouver Island firm lost $21,000 in stolen or damaged equipment, including 34 power saws valued from $250 to $400 and a number of $1,200 portable radios, a 25-ton capacity hydraulic jack and air compressors costing $280 apiece.

Significantly, it is during the hunting season when the greater part of these depredations occur. That does not mean that hunters are the chief offenders. The operators, in fact, consider members of organized fish and game clubs thoroughly responsible people. But the organized thievery uses the influx of hunters—or fishermen, hikers and recreationists generally—as a cover.

Rapacity may explain the looting of loggers' tools and clothing, but not the vandalism that harasses the operator and his crews. Fire extinguishers have been emptied and first aid kits scattered. Fuel is dumped and truck tanks emptied. Rigging is loosened with consequent risk to life.

Fuel drums, water tanks and all sorts of equipment are targets of shotgun and rifle, possibly grudge actions but more likely simply thoughtless stupidities.

At least one big company is contemplating a patrol system, but reluctantly, because it would interfere with the very freedom the outdoorsman finds so gratifying.

It suggests as a possible alternative public co-operation to discourage the few who are threatening to impede this freedom. It urges the reporting of suspected vandals or thieves, and their car licences if possible, to police or company concerned.

It wouldn't work. People hate that sort of involvement. Strongly as they may condemn the practices of which the logging companies complain, they will not play the part of informer.

The only answer is a repeated appeal to the better instincts of the public, lock-up storage for tools and equipment, or the patrol one company has in mind. Or possibly all three. Closing of the roads would be angrily resisted and might encourage reprisals even more damaging than the lawlessness of thieves and vandals.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

AXE TO GRIND

Sir: It is interesting to note that the resignation of Blair Peters from the chamber of commerce is worthy of so much space in your edition of Jan. 23, when it indicated complaints that some members of the chamber were openly supporting a candidate. It did not mention that the business premises of this particular previous member of the chamber was almost the second headquarters for one of the politicians running for office, and therefore it appears that Mr. Peters is only angry that all the others in the chamber were not supporting his candidate.

Concerning the Brow issue, it is most unfair that the chamber should be expected to take sides and support the Brow Committee, as they, in most cases, are employers, and the time has come already for these men, as employers, to discharge some of their own staff for various different reasons. They, as employers, know also that they are not required to tell the general public why they discharged any particular individual.

Many sound thinking people are starting to question the real motives behind these individuals who served on the Brow Committee. The person who has just resigned from the chamber is no exception. Were they really trying to help Jack Brow?—or use this incident to destroy something far removed from the banners they were waving?

It seems to me, and I know every one of the Brow Committee personally, that, with one exception, they all had an axe to grind. One of their principal officers said in my company, and I have offered to testify in court to this very statement, that he was out to get one of our city administrators fired, and he did not care how he did it.

Is the chamber really accepting this resignation "with regret"? Have they the conscience to say how they really feel about it? Has this new council the conscience to tell the people what really has been happening during these past few months, how the Brow Committee and the Kelowna Citizens Association is really one and the same thing, and what they really stood for?

Let us hear now from the old council members, the past mayor and the old members of the Parks and Recreation Commission. They, as "employers" are not bound by conscience, to withhold the truth any longer.

Yours very truly,

CANADA'S STORY

Better Postal Service Helped Confederation

By BOB BOWMAN

It has been said that the nightly weather maps on television are helping to unite Canada. It is the one time that Canadians look on the nation as a whole.

The postal service played a somewhat similar role before Confederation. Benjamin Franklin founded the Canadian postal service in 1763 and it remained under British control until 1851. Letters from Britain to the North American colonies were usually landed at Halifax and the postage across the Atlantic was one shilling. Another two pence was added for destinations west of Halifax.

On Jan. 27, 1847, Nova Scotia appointed a special committee to try to improve the postal service, and it proved to be an important step towards Confederation. The committee's report led to a meeting at Montreal which was attended by delegates from Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Prince Edward Island postal service was controlled by Halifax in those days although the islanders expanded their own service illegally.

The Montreal conference resulted in greatly improved postal service among the British North American colonies and Britain transferred control of the service to them. The first Canadian stamps were issued in April, 1851, and were engraved to prevent forgery. Letters could circulate among Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland for three pence.

OTHER EVENTS ON JAN. 27: 1721—Mail stages were established between Quebec and Montreal.

1826—The pope made Upper Canada a separate diocese with Kingston the see.

1854—Great Western Railway opened service between London and Windsor.

1858—Ottawa became the capital of Canada.

1903—Andrew Carnegie established libraries in Toronto.

1916—Women in Manitoba gained right to vote.

1961—Montreal authorized building of $300,000,000 subway.

NEWS ANALYSIS

The U.S. War On Inflation

By PHILIP DEANE

Foreign Affairs Analyst

The free enterprise system—or whatever it remains—has shown itself capable of production feats unmatched by planned economies except in times of war. It is understandable, therefore, that in the U.S. where private initiative has scored its biggest successes, the fight against inflation should be orthodox, trying to avoid the controls that in wartime increase production without allowing for runaway inflation.

More and more economists, however, are confessing to their basic ignorance about what really makes a free enterprise economy tick. In theory, it is the law of supply and demand that regulates the economy; it is on the basis of supply and demand that price inflation is now being fought: decrease demand by raising interest rates, reducing the money supply and government buying of goods and services and the people who sell either goods or services will have to lower their prices, to keep on selling. In theory, services, including labor, will get to cost less, which should be reflected in the cost of articles handled or made by those who provide the services.

It seems to me that this theory cannot work in complex societies such as ours in which the conditions and cost of production are not set by any objective standards but by the "adversary" procedure of strike versus lockout.

Too many services are essential to the complex work of a city, services that cannot be performed by the ordinary citizen but must be performed by the specialist. This specialist, therefore, has the possibility of blackmailing the society to obtain higher wages. The most telling illustration concerns medical services. Gone are the days when we delivered our own babies; the obstetricians, therefore, can hold us up to ransom.

Simultaneously, with the use of computers, more and more employers can so plan their production as to minimize the loss of work stoppages to themselves—thought not to the economy as a whole. There are manufacturers—very many of them—who work their plants at excess capacity and for whom reduced production may be more profitable. So when demands slacken, they do not lose enough money to make them reduce prices.

On the contrary, many manufacturers have successfully compensated themselves for reduced sales by increasing prices. And many get away with this even if what they produce is not an absolutely essential item, in objective terms. A product—they know—does not have to be essential to sell. It is only necessary to make the buyers feel uncomfortable if they do not possess this product; if you don't buy our latest anti-perspirant, you'll have wet armpits; television can make this appear so catastrophic a social failing that the unemployed, on the dole, go on buying stuff to keep their armpits dry. The law of supply and demand cannot operate in the surreal world of TV.

OTTAWA REPORT

Consumer Council 'Achieves Little'

By PATRICK NICHOLSON

It isn't only the spending of $100,000 of the taxpayers' money on the Canadian Consumer Council that bothers Mrs. Grace MacInnis so much. More serious in her perspective view is that the project was set up to help the Canadian consumers yet, in the words of one council member: "after a year of fruitless meetings, next to nothing has been accomplished."

Mrs. MacInnis had been complaining in the House of Commons about the year-old council, quoting its members as admitting that it has spent a year in almost total idleness, and is torn by bitter internal dissension. I asked the New Democrat MP for Vancouver-Kingsway what she felt it should have done. "It was set two important tasks as a starter," she replied. "One was to prepare a charter of consumers' rights, and the other was to recommend steps to help low income Canadians. It has done neither."

HOUSEWIVES' CLAMPION

Grace MacInnis is the daughter of the late J. S. Woodsworth, founder-head of the CCF, and she is the widow of P.E.I.'s Angus MacInnis, who was also one of the early stalwarts of the CCF in the House of Commons. She is always to the forefront in Parliament in speaking up on the problems of the housewife, as is appropriate for the only woman now sitting in the House. In this role, especially now when prices are such a grave problem, the diminutive grey-haired feminine firebrand has become the Number One gadfly bugging Basford, the Minister of Consumer Affairs.

Just before Christmas, she elicited from him the information that the honorary council has a full-time staff of four: an executive director at $23,000 a year, a research assistant at $6,600, an administrative assistant at $6,000 and a stenographer at $5,232. The council consists of 24 members, intended as a cross-section of the community, under the chairmanship of the able Professor David Leighton, business administration expert at the University of Western Ontario. It is expected to meet four times a year, and it has cost $100,000 in its first year, says Mrs. MacInnis.

"When the Company of Young Canadians appeared to be putting $99,000 of the taxpayers' money in jeopardy, the government panicked and set up a trust-ship," she said to me. "But this $100,000 a year council has done nothing except produce a report on consumer credit, and the government seems undisturbed."

"What has the council achieved so far?" I asked Mrs. MacInnis. "Asked Mrs. MacInnis: 'As far as the charter of consumers' rights, the chairman of the council has said 'We have got no tangible results on this so far', she replied. "And as to looking into ways to help the low income consumer, another member said that 'nothing meaningful' had been done about this."

KEPT SECRET

Mrs. MacInnis suggested to Mr. Basford that, since the present members of the council have come up with nothing to help the low income consumers, he should now consider appointing representatives of that group to the council.

Mr. Basford replied that he had written to each member of the council, requesting views on the role and structure of the council. He has received replies, and he will be "weighing those views to determine whether some changes should now be made." Mrs. MacInnis asked that this correspondence should be made public in the House of Commons, for the information of MPs and all Canadian consumers. But the minister refused this request, on the astonishing grounds that "it is of a confidential nature" and therefore it would not be in the public interest to reveal it.

Why not? I wondered to myself. Would it give aid and comfort to the enemy? Or is it being kept secret for the politically more important reason that it would reveal the government as being of no aid and precious little comfort to Canadian consumers?

But surely, the courteous Mrs. MacInnis argued more mildly to the minister, correspondence concerning consumers concerns every Canadian and should not be kept secret. "In view of the fact that the taxpayers of Canada paid $100,000 for the operations of the consumer council, I do not think that the council should be considered the private property of the minister," she protested to him, in criticism of this over-secretive government.

Chalk one up to Good Gracious Grace, Meanwhile the consumers' best charter of rights remains "Convent emptor—let this buyer beware."

Bennett has also been invited to attend.

The victory banquet will be held Tuesday evening, with a cocktail hour in the banquet room at 6:30 p.m. in Capri. At 7:15 p.m. the personnel of the participating rinks, and the head table guests will be piped into the banquet. Mrs. H. R. Henderson will be chairman of the banquet program.

This is the first time since 1956 that the Kelowna Club has hosted the provincial playdowns and Mrs. Underhill was also serving as president of BCLCA at that time.

The Barb Steed rink of Mountain Shadows Club, Kelowna, who recently won the South Okanagan zone are in Lumby today competing in the district finals. Most districts are in the process of declaring winners this week. The Yukon district winner announced last week was the Helen Fitch rink of Whitehorse. Playoffs start with club playdowns and progress to zone, to district and on to the provincial playdown.

High School Girl Attends Trade Conference

VANCOUVER (CP) — Madeleine Boscoe found out what she had suspected all along: that in business, everybody is money-mad.

To prove her point, the 17-year-old high school girl attended a two-day trade and industrial development conference along with about 350 businessmen.

Asked what conclusions she drew after sitting through 23 speeches and often-lengthy discussions from the floor, she replied:

"Everything centres all the time on money. Everybody is so money-minded."

"What really surprised me was that people would come right out and say that they're in business just to make money."

"I somehow thought they'd be more subtle about it."

A Grade 12 student from North Vancouver, Madeleine first got the idea of attending the conference when she saw an invitation in a newspaper to "participate in the British Columbia trade and industry development conference."

"You read and hear about business and economics," Madeleine said, "and you sort of imagine what the business world is like."

"This seemed like an ideal way to find out for myself if all those things I'd been told and had imagined were true."

FEW WOMEN THERE

When she arrived at the conference she found she was one of barely half a dozen females.

"I'd expected there'd have been more variety in the delegates," she said, "perhaps some housewives, even some bums."

She added that she didn't find the talks, which ranged from trade and provincial resource development to public financing to the pressure of foreign fishing fleets on B.C. coastal fisheries, at all technical or difficult to understand.

Other impressions she formed during the conference included: A m a z e m e n t "at unsophisticated" relations between labor and management—"Why they act as if they were still in the 19th century, the way they go at each other's throats."

Disnay "at the way Canada is considered a part of the States."

"Eventually, perhaps, we'll all live in one big 'world country' but right now, I still feel very nationalistic about Canada."

Women Drivers Do Dipsticks

HALIFAX (CP) — Female automobile mechanics may not be the result, but an automotive trouble-shooting course for women here should lessen the number of damsels in distress on Nova Scotia highways.

The Halifax recreation department sponsors a seven-week course designed to teach women the basic principles of the automobile and to spot minor troubles before they become serious.

And it's not unusual to see an eager group of about 40 women paying strict attention to their two male instructors, Curtis Joudrey and Dave Levy.

One enthusiastic student says: "I never knew what a dipstick was before."

The class, held Tuesday and Thursday nights, consists of a one-hour lecture followed by an hour of practical work. Then the women get to show their stuff by changing tires, checking oil and performing various functions they were taught in past lessons.

Among topics covered during the sessions are exhaust, fuel, ignition, cooling, electrical and brake systems. Although no final examinations are held, the women are put through a series of weekly tests.

Instructor Levy says he's always wanted to teach a course like this. He feels that not only women, but men, should take a course of this nature.

"We hope to teach the girls how to identify the rocks, ruts and rolling sounds commonly associated with car trouble," he says.

1970 FASHIONS WITH 1940 LOOK

TORONTO (CP) — Ken Coupland has an idea for a new 1970 fashion—old 1940 fashions.

For years the 23-year-old Toronto photographer has been intrigued by women's fashions of the 1940s—dresses with zippers heavy enough to service a flight bag and hems machine-stitched with the delicacy of an army tent.

So he and a group of friends decided to buy about 150 garments they found hanging in an abandoned downtown dress shop. They paid $150 for the lot and, mostly for their own amusement, hung them in a gallery-fashion in an old house.

Now the house is open to bargain hunters and the prices vary from $3 to $40. Mr. Coupland hopes to appeal to the costume-oriented young.

"The young women I know want fashion to be funny even more than fun. They're not reverent about fashion. That's why you see girls wearing all those freaky fur coats; they're absurdly decorative."

Her equal partner in the project is Dave Madluk, 27, who has his own construction company. He joined her after coming to the 22-year-old designer's shop to do alterations.

Today, the buyers come to her. The shop that bears her name is turning out 300 dresses a month.

Mrs. Donna Harney was hostess to a delightful smorgasbord supper early Saturday evening on the occasion of her birthday. Dancing was enjoyed later in the evening at the Colony.

Boarding a plane at Kelowna airport Monday morning enroute to Lisbon, Spain, were three Kelowna youths, Bruce Acres, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Acres, DeHart Avenue; Barry Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wagner, Richter Street and Victor Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thompson, Valley Road. Greg Dawson, another Kelowna youth, who left earlier and made the trip abroad by boat, will meet them at Lisbon. Greg reported to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Scotty Dawson, Maquinna Road, that he enjoyed touring the United Nations building and other points of interest in New York prior to boarding ship. The foursome, who all have return tickets, plan to tour Europe, if possible by renting a car.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. McLaughlin of Saucier Road thoroughly enjoyed The Man Who Came To Dinner, presented by the Penticton Theatre Club Saturday night at Penticton. They reported the performance was well worth the trip, moved fast, with firm direction and that James Only as Mr. Whiteside turned in a good performance.

Rotarian Uses Slides Of Trip For University Women's Meet

The Kelowna University Women's Club started off 1970 with another interesting meeting. Guest speaker for the January meeting was Lloyd Schmidt of Okanagan Mission, who was the Kelowna Rotary Club's representative in the Rotary International sponsored trip to Bolivia last September and October. Mr. Schmidt illustrated his talk with slides.

For two months he lived with the people of Bolivia, learning about their country and their way of life. He travelled from 17,000 feet above the sea level with a 45 degree temperature in Le Pas to 800 feet above sea level into the jungle-type vegetation and temperatures.

He spoke of the terribly high ratio of infant mortality; the lack of sanitation facilities in some areas, the turbulent political situation, the education system such as it was or the complete lack of it; the mining of tin and many other topics. It was a very informative and interesting evening.

The club is looking forward to many stimulating and informative programs at their upcoming monthly meetings.

Cross Canada Folklore Presented By Les Feux Follet Ballet Troupes

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Lund, artistic director for Les Feux Follet ballet troupe, has learned to accept bad dancers at auditions.

He estimates he saw nearly 400 dancers at auditions during a 10-day visit to major Canadian cities, seeking Canadian talent in an effort to make Les Feux Follets as impeccable a dance organization as the Moscow Ballet Folkloric of Mexico.

"Some dancers were very good; some I'd like to see again in about two years," he said.

"There was one incredibly talented girl dancing in Winnipeg—and only 14 years old. Too bad, her parents wouldn't let her join the troupe."

When those he auditioned are nervous, Mr. Lund cajoles them in a low key: "If you don't understand the step, ask me again."

The girls who comply stand a chance of being added to Mr. Lund's list of hopefuls who eventually could form the permanent company of 42 dancers. The company is to start rehearsals in March, dividing into two groups. Twelve members are to perform at the Canadian pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, for 26 weeks. The remaining 30 will embark on a European tour from May through July, making stops in The Netherlands, West Germany and the Soviet Union.

The Montreal-based Feux Follets began in that city 10 years ago under the guidance of Michel Carlier, a folklore expert who brought Indian and Eskimo folk dance traditions into the group's repertoire.

Under Mr. Lund's direction, the troupe continues to represent Canadian folklore with dances of the West Coast and Plains Indians, the Eskimos, and such features as the Acadian clog dance and intricate Highland dances.

But despite its cross-Canada character, it is still identified with Quebec, a feature Mr. Lund is trying to change.

"I'm trying to get across the point that Les Feux Follets is a national folk ballet troupe," he said. "Many people seem to think... that this is a Quebec company."

Financial support for the group at present comes from both private contributions and grants from the Canada Council. Last year the council contributed $115,000.

Spice In Your Life Will Cost More

CALGARY (CP) — Having a little spice in your life is going to cost more in 1970.

Poor weather influences spice crops around the world and poor weather was the rule in spice-growing areas last year, says a recent release from the Canadian Spice Association.

"Too much or too little rain dramatically affects the prices Canadian housewives pay for their favorite spices and herbs," says the release.

As well, spice millers are concerned about the availability of many of the more popular items.

Black pepper has more than doubled in price because of crop failure in Indonesia, the major producer.

Celery seed, popular in pickling, is more than three times the price of last year's crop.

Paprika prices have advanced sharply because of heavy rains at harvest time in Spain.

French-grown herbs—marjoram, savory and thyme—are more costly and difficult to obtain because of a long, dry summer.

A crop failure in Madagascar has sent the price of cloves soaring to more than five times their usual cost.

All ginger from Jamaica and India is at the highest price level since the Second World War.

WI Group Adds Committee For Buying

The Lakeview Heights Women's Institute decided at the January meeting to set up a buying committee for the club's various undertakings during the year.

A pot luck supper is planned for Feb. 2 for all husbands and wives. An exciting and interesting meeting is planned for all with Mrs. Hector Turvey in charge of entertainment.

A new member, Mrs. Cyril Taylor was welcomed to the organization and all newcomers to the Lakeview Heights area are invited to attend the next meeting on March 2 at 8 p.m. in the Women's Institute hall on Anders Road. For further information call president, Mrs. Don Poole at 3-4137.

Plans for a coffee party on the morning of March 18 in the WI hall were made. This is an opportunity to meet newcomers to the district. A table of baked goods will also be available.

Plans for the spring rummage sale were discussed and residents are urged to save 'rummage' for the Institute members for this sale.

Consumers Need More Knowledge On Fabric Finishes

EDMONTON (CP) — Many consumers do not understand the terms used for water-, stain- and spot-resistant finishes, says Marilyn Hemming, clothing and textile specialist for the Alberta agriculture department.

A "water-repellent finish" makes a fabric resist wetting, but it is not waterproof. A "waterproof finish," made by applying rubber, lacquer, linseed oil compounds or synthetic resins to a fabric, means that it will shed water under normal pressures.

Both these finishes would provide resistance to water-born stains, but not to oily-type stains. Some fabrics treated with these finishes, if stained, hold the staining substance tenaciously, making stain removal difficult, Mrs. Hemming said.

"Soil-release" finishes allow the fabric to release oily-type soil and stains in laundering.

More and more clothing is coming on the market with these finishes, Mrs. Hemming said in an interview. They make for easier care for clothes.

But she advises consumers to learn the differences and know what might be expected from the finish.

"Ask for a label, read it and keep it for future reference."

'Bubble' Encloses Patio And Lawn

TORONTO (CP) — With Ontario winters apparently here to stay, Terence McLorg is out to make the best of things.

Mr. McLorg, a Saskatchewan native with a mechanical engineering degree from the University of British Columbia, thinks it's possible to be sort of independent of the weather.

To start with, he has designed a structure of transparent plastic sheeting enclosing a 1,400 square feet of patio and lawn on the north side of his house. The roof structure is air-supported.

He calls the "five-bubble" unit a polydome because it's possible to add any number of domes to the assemblage.

"Enclosing space in this way is simply the second stage of air-conditioning," he says. "We have to get beyond the concept of air-conditioning individual buildings."

Mr. McLorg says his prototype cost about $2,400. A neighbor helped him build it.

The first patent for an air-supported roof structure was granted in 1917, but the idea was little used until aeronautical specialists developed structures 20 years ago to shield radar installations along the Pinetree Line in the North.

Since then, single-dome structures have had military, industrial and recreational applications.

The United States pavilion under construction for Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, includes air-supported structures.

CORRECTION

On Jan. 21 an item appeared in a Beta Sigma Phi write-up regarding the local group's joining hands with Vernon and Penticton Chapters in assisting the Okanagan Neurological Association. The Kelowna club joins Vernon in this worthy project since Penticton has not yet reached a decision.

First Woman To Direct Major Port

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Miriam E. Wolff, first woman named to direct the Port of San Francisco, says one of her first projects will be to pave the way for women membership in the port's men-only World Trade Club.

Miss Wolff, 53, attractive and unmarried, was named port director Friday by Mayor Joseph Alioto, who said she also is the first woman to head a major U.S. port.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

Exclusive Healing Substance Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids.

If you want satisfactory relief from "itching Itch"—here's a good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance that promptly relieves the burning itch and pain—actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one case after another "very striking improvement" was reported and verified. And most important... this improvement was maintained over a period of months.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyn) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulate growth of new tissue. Now Bio-Dyn is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores—satisfaction or money refunded.

ANN LANDERS

Select Guests Carefully For Wedding Reception

Dear Ann Landers: My hat is off to the bride who knew how to deal with those clowns who signed themselves "Outcasts from Dry Gulch." Some people cannot be trusted around free booze. When such is the case, they ought not to be included.

My wedding was in the private dining room of a hotel. We had the liquor on a table with glasses and ice and mixers. Three jokers (I didn't want to invite them but my fiancé insisted) walked out with four bottles of Scotch before the party was underway. They ditched the bottles in the potted palms and came back to enjoy the festivities.

When the dancing started they were completely stoned. One of the jerks stepped on my gown and ripped it. Then he had the nerve to say, "You'll never wear this dress again so what's the difference? Ha, ha."

When they started to fight, my father asked them to leave. They left, but not before one of them put a fist through the wedding cake.

What should have been my happiest day was ruined because of three drunks. I hope you'll print this letter for the benefit of other brides who are having arguments with their fiancés about the guest list.—Wrecked Nuptials.

Dear Mary: It's a wise lady who knows the liquid capacity of her friends and acts accordingly. If someone's not to end up mad, let it be THEM.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently our entire high school student body was punished because three or four kids did something they had no business doing. The ruling was made by the principal. Several of us think it is unjust. What was once a free period is now a compulsory study period because a few kids goofed off.

Shouldn't the pranksters have been punished individually? We'd like your opinion.—N.V. of Danville.

Dear N.V.: Punishing the group for the bad behavior of a few is an extremely effective technique. Hell knows no fury like the wrath of one's peers. When the entire student body must suffer for the sins of a few, you can be sure the innocent will ride herd on the guilty and apply a little moral persuasion.

I hope the principal will consider shortening the term of punishment. I'll bet if he gives the student body another chance, there'll be no more goofing off.

Dear Ann Landers: May I comment on Generation Gap—the pregnant bride who thought it was rotten of her parents to voice disapproval of a church wedding because she was in her fifth month?

Parents do not owe a daughter a fancy wedding. A wedding is a gift, not an obligation.

Perhaps the friends of the bride and groom might think it is groovy to see a bride, heavy with child, waddling down the aisle, but relatives and friends of the parents might not enjoy such a sight.

To expect a girl to hang on to her virginity until she is married is, of course, wildly unrealistic, according to a Vassar senior who visited us recently. But I don't feel it is unreasonable to ask a girl to refrain from starting a family until she is married. Thanks for letting me have my say.—Square Clara.

Dear Clara: About 2,000 other parents had their say, too, but you said it best. Thanks for letting me have my say.—Square Clara.

WHITE WRITES

A Storehouse In Montreal

By LORNE WHITE

The Montreal Canadiens have so much talent, it hurts! How many times have you heard that from an habitual habitant hater, whose favorite National Hockey League team happens to be Detroit, Boston or Chicago?

Well it happens every year the flying Frenchmen take the Prince of Wales Trophy, or the Stanley Cup, which is just about a yearly habit. And this season it again has come to light, that without the Canadiens' storehouse of hockey players, the calibre of NHL just wouldn't be the same.

First Montreal castoff to come to mind, especially at this time of the season, of course, is Chicago's Mr. Zero, 26-year-old Tony Esposito.

Tony, brother of the famous Phil, is this year making his own name in the record books, and in the minds of the Montreal executive.

AT THE TIME OF THE NHL DRAFT meeting last June, the Canadiens were again solid in the nets, with Lorne (Gump) Worsley and young Rogie Vachon guarding the area between the pipes—there was no need keeping the little Italian from Sault Ste. Marie. He wasn't overly impressive in the bleu, blanc, et rouge, but did manage a 2.73 goals-against average and two shutouts in 12 games last season.

This year, the Michigan State graduate is the talk of the league, and with a 2.07 average, and a total of 10 shutouts thus far this season, has kept the Habitant Hustlers numb, especially when the Gumper has failed to report to Montreal for the past few weeks, leaving the goaltending to youngsters, Vachon and Phil Myre.

The Canadiens continue to live.

For another example of Montreal depth, try Jacques Plante of the St. Louis Blues, the wiry original masked man.

JAKE THE SNAKE played 12 long years with the Canadiens, and in 1963 was traded to the New York Rangers after several confrontations with the Montreal coaching staff.

The 1964-65 season proved to be his last with New York. He complained of pains in his right knee before the season started and was sent to the minors. He came back, but after the season, retired at the age of 36.

In 1968 however, Scotty Bowman of St. Louis, and one time Montreal scout, went after the retired netminder and got him from the Rangers in the draft.

Although Plante never really came back to haunt his original team, he did do a miraculous job. He and his partner in crime Glenn Hall, swept up the Vezina Trophy last season, and Jacques, at the age of 40 recorded the lowest goals-against average in the NHL—1.96, as well as posting five shutouts.

AGAIN THIS YEAR, Plante is doing the job, and has blanked the opposition four times already, while showing a respectable 2.22 goals-against average, helping the St. Louis club hold down third place as a defensive power.

But the Habitanis are still climbing.

Red Berenson played college hockey at the University of Michigan where he was an All-American. A native of Regina, Saskatchewan, he was offered scholarships to North Dakota and Denver as well as Michigan.

At the age of 22, Red turned pro with the Canadiens in 1962 and there were a number of adjustments he had to make in the switch from college to pro hockey. The adjustments didn't come easily, and the centerman was traded in June of 1966 to the New York Rangers. He was used primarily as a penalty killer in New York.

On Nov. 29 of the next season, the Rangers were in last place in the East Division of the expanded NHL. St. Louis was in the cellar of the West.

So the two teams engineered a trade, that sent Berenson and defenceman Barclay Plager to the Blues in exchange for forwards Ron Stewart and Ron Atwell.

BERENSON BECAME AN INSTANT SUCCESS, and compiled a total of 24 goals for the Blues that season, and led them into the Stanley Cup finals against his old teammates. Last season, The Red Baron upped his goal production by 11, and this year is one short of making this his third 20-plus season.

Content and happy are the Montreal Canadiens.

Phil Goyette, a penalty killer, bench-warmer with the Habs until the Plante trade, in which he was just thrown in for extra measure, has this year been the surprise of the league.

The shifty centre, was selected to the first all-star team in the West, and is currently in fourth place on the scoring list with 51 points.

Speedy leftwinger Dave Balon, with the Rangers, scored 26 goals with the red, white and blue, but was shoved aside, and this year is just three points back of Goyette among the leading scorers.

The Canadiens didn't stop there.

DURING THE 1968 SUMMER DRAFT meetings, Sam Pollock, general manager of the Canadiens gave away a whole line.

In order to protect Dick Duff and Claude Provost, Pollock dealt Danny Grant and Claude Larose to the Minnesota North Stars for two future Minnesota draft choices. In the previous summer, 1967, when the first expansion was set up, Bluff had secured the right to negotiate for the services of Danny O'Shea, also a property of the Montreal Canadiens.

As it turned out, the GOL line, is one of the hottest young bunch of hockey players around.

O'Shea logged 15 goals, 34 assists for 49 points. Larose got 25 counters, 37 assists, and 62 points and Grant was good for 34 goals, 31 assists and 65 points. Grant won the Calder Memorial Trophy as the NHL rookie of the year and broke the all-time rookie scoring record of the great Bernie Geoffrion.

BUT THE DEFENDING STANLEY CUP champions will do their thing without them.

Other names crop up for the list of ex-Montrealers, names like Ab McDonald and Jim Roberts of St. Louis, Norm Ferguson, Bill Hicke and Carol Vadnais with Oakland, Leon Rochefort with Los Angeles, and all the Frenchmen playing for the Philadelphia Flyers.

There are many more.

Yes, there are many more that have gone from the Montreal organization, but there are also many more to come.

The Canadiens have the Seals and North Stars' top draft choices for the next few years. They still have the option at the draft of taking the top French amateur. And their junior clubs have several players who can make the jump to the big league this season.

The big machine proved last season, that they could win with anyone as their coach, and they'll probably do it again.

Canadian Boxing Champ In Contention For World

NEW YORK (CP) — Donato Paduano, undefeated Canadian welterweight champion, vaulted himself into contention for a crack at world champion Jose Napoles when he easily disposed of highly touted Irish Pat Murphy in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

But the baby-faced Italian-born Montrealer says he is not ready yet for such a match and doesn't want it pushed on him.

"I know they will try to push me for an early fight with Napoles, but I don't think I'm ready for him now," Paduano said.

"Maybe in 15 months, I will be."

Garden matchmaker Teddy Brenner told Paduano's managers, Al Lang of New York and Roger Larivee of Montreal:

"I know you already have a fight scheduled for Donato in Montreal and after that you have nothing lined up."

"Then we will get down to business and talk about a fight in the $50,000 range," said Brenner.

The amount mentioned by Brenner led to the speculation that Napoles was what he had in mind.

FIGHTS IN MONTREAL Paduano, now 17-0, will meet Joey Durelle in the Montreal Forum on March 3 in a return bout for the Canadian title. Paduano took the title away from Durelle on a bruising 12-round split decision in the same ring last December. The fight drew the largest gate for a Montreal fight in years—$102,000.

Paduano, who "retired" as an elevator operator at the YMCA in Montreal at the age of 17, handed Murphy his first defeat after 25 straight wins as a professional fighter.

The fight was so lopsided that one official, and The Canadian Press, scored it 10 rounds to none for the popular Canadian. The other two officials scored it 9-1, giving Murphy the first round which was fairly close.

Despite his easy victory in the feature bout of the card, Paduano was not completely satisfied.

"I couldn't get everything together," Paduano said. "I figure I only gave about 85 per cent of myself."

"I'm sure I should have dropped him, but he's very sneaky and has a good right hand and left hook and you have to watch him at all times."

EXPECTED MORE "I wasn't surprised at how easy the fight went after the first few rounds but I expected him to be better."

Paduano said bad weather in Montreal curbed his roadwork.

Paduano, in answer to questions, said he figured he is 60 per cent a better fighter now than he was when he represented Canada in the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City.

Rattling off combinations in machine-gun style, Paduano was all over Murphy after the first round and the only thing in doubt seemed to be how long the body could take such punishment.

Paduano nailed Murphy with a terrific right hand at the bell to end the seventh round and Murphy looked like he was through for the night.

The lucky 20-year-old from West New York, N.J., lasted out the last three rounds on courage alone.

CROWD LIKED IT The mixed Italian-Irish crowd gave both fighters a standing ovation at the end.

"You're a future champion," an excited fan shouted at Paduano as he headed for his dressing room.

"I'll try with all my heart," the 21-year-old Canadian replied. Lang couldn't hold back his excitement in the dressing room following his charge's performance.

"He's the best fighter I've ever had, and I've had a lot of them," Lang said. "As for girls, Donato's father said he can't get married till he makes a million," Lang quipped.

CARRY EAST'S HOPES In senior men's competition, Eastern Canada's hopes seem to lie with David McGillivray of Toller Cranston, two 20-year-olds from the Toronto Cricket club. Westerners have been eyeing Bill Marchyshyn of the host Royal Glenora club, and Patrick McKilligan of the North Shore Winter Club.

But Karen has always been full of surprises. In 1966, she nearly upset defending champion Petra Burka of Toronto with a dazzling freestyle display.

Cathy Lee Irwin, also 17, of the Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club, is rated as her chief rival.

SPORTS IN SHORT Browns Trade Warfield In Hopes Of Getting A QB

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns, trying to land a top-flight quarterback from the current United States college crop, have traded away Paul Warfield, one of the top receivers in professional football, for an early choice in today's football draft.

The Browns traded the 27-year-old Warfield to Miami Dolphins Monday in exchange for Miami's top draft choice, Tom Brady, the Browns pick No. 3 today.

Mike Phipps of Purdue is one of the passers the Browns are reported interested in to back up Bill Nelson. The 29-year-old Nelson led the Browns to the National Football League's Eastern Conference title despite problems with his knees. However, the Browns were creamed by Minnesota Vikings in the NFL title game.

The Browns paved the way for the Warfield trade Monday by acquiring Homer Jones, New York Giants' ace receiver, Cleveland gave up rookie running back Ron Johnson, defensive tackle Jim Kanicki and linebacker Wayne Meylan to the Giants to get the 28-year-old Jones.

ASHE WINS SYDNEY (AP) — Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., today won the Australian National men's singles championship, the first leg of a grand slam of world tennis—the Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. titles.

Ashe registered a 6-4, 9-7, 6-2 victory over Richard Crenly of Australia in 84-minute duel at White City and became first non-Australian to take out the title since Alex Onieco of Mexico won in 1959.

DEBATE BEGINS

Must Put Constitution Before People Says PM

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons began a two-day debate Monday aimed at getting more Canadians involved in discussion on Canada's constitution. Spokesmen for the three opposition parties voiced agreement with a government motion to establish a joint parliamentary committee to review papers and decisions made by the continuing federal-provincial conferences to change the constitution. Prime Minister Trudeau said it was time to take the issue "out of the wings and before Parliament and the people."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the discussions are making little progress. David Lewis (N.D.P.—York South) said the committee, in travelling across Canada, would involve opposition MPs in the constitutional discussions. "Even more important... this is the only way in which the people of Canada, through their various organizations, can be heard on the subject of constitutional change."

A DESIRE FOR UNITY

Mr. Trudeau said unity of any country could only be built by a consensus of the people—"the desire of the people to live together within the boundaries of the same country."

Mr. Trudeau said that the provinces themselves started the constitutional debate and that the federal government had been criticized by other parties and by the press for not taking part in the constitutional conference called in 1967 by Premier John Roberts of Ontario.

Now that Ottawa was engaged in the debate, it was being accused of being "too hung up" with it to do other things.

Mr. Trudeau said it was important for Canadians to know that no federal program within Ottawa's jurisdiction was being held up while the long process of constitutional review went on.

The prime minister listed some of these programs as minority rights, pollution and the "Indian problem."

He said the federal government was guided by a number of principles before engaging in the debate.

One was that it shouldn't take place until it was recognized that enough Canadians desired it. Another was that the country be stable—at a time when both federal and provincial governments were strong.

Mr. Stanfield said he agrees that constitutional change could only be achieved through consensus. This was lacking at the present time.

It is time, he said, elected municipal officials were involved in the debate. Through the parliamentary committee, their views could be made known.

He wondered whether Mr. Trudeau's heart really was in the process of constitutional reform. If the prime minister believed that failure to reach agreement on it would be serious, why didn't he say so?

Mr. Lewis said the desire for constitutional change came from the cities and was generated by the problems accompanying Canada's development into an urban and industrial country.

Mr. Trudeau failed to recognize this and was responsible, therefore, for the market-place haggling that won at the conference.

He said the prime minister's refusal to admit that Quebec was a special problem demanding special solutions also could remain an obstacle to progress.

C. A. Gauthier (Creditiste—Roberval) said Ottawa has forgotten that it is the creature of the provinces and not vice versa.

The federal government was responsible for the pollution of the constitution.

11 SEED POWER

Gerald W. Baldwin (P.C.—Peace River) said there must be a stop to federal-provincial meetings in which all 11 governments tried to hold the power they had and add to it.

This wasn't good enough and such conferences would get nowhere using such tactics.

He also said Ottawa was using the constitution as a smokescreen in not pressing ahead with solutions to such problems as pollution.

Stan Schumacher (P.C.—Palliser) said he believes the present constitution is adequate to meet any demands made upon it. But it lacked the vital provisions to curb the powers of the executive.

An urgent change was to place curbs on the taxing and spending power of the central government and the ability of the prime minister to ignore Parliament.

Martial Asselin (P.C.—Charlevoix) said Ottawa is denying the provinces an opportunity to play a dynamic role in confederation.

Nothing had been done so far to meet Quebec demands. If Ottawa didn't allow Quebec to perform an active role, there were fears it would opt out of Canada.

Every time Quebec tried to improve its contacts with the French-speaking world, Ottawa made "fences and even objected."

JACK BROW MAKES RETURN

He also warned the city would run into the exact same problem with Mr. Brow working under a new parks and recreation director as it did when Gordon Smith held the post.

He said that was a "sick set up," that Mr. Brow was already on staff when Mr. Smith was hired and never accepted his superior's position and authority.

NOT HAPPY

Ald. S. A. Hodge said he was confused by the whole issue. "I'm very unhappy about the whole thing," he said several times. "I think last year's council fouled this up really good and I don't know how we're supposed to get ourselves out of it."

One attempt to end the discussion—a tabling motion from Ald. Peters—was defeated four to three.

The issue was further confused when Ald. W. J. C. Kane brought up the point that council may not be sure (nor the consultants) what post the city is trying to fill.

He said he favors separating the parks and recreation department and merging the parks with city engineering. This would mean hiring only a recreation director.

Ald. Holland said she resented implications the Brow question was a "political issue" (Ald. Moss' description) and said she does not understand how P. S. Ross and Partners got the idea about the condition for hiring. There is "some serious, dugger involved," she said, and added Mr. Currie is getting erroneous reports.

Ald. Moss called for one week's delay while a parks and recreation director is found. He was told by Mayor Roth that P. S. Ross will make a suggestion "as soon as possible," but not necessarily this week.

The list of 37 applicants has been "narrowed down," he said, but did not say by how much.

The decision to hire Mr. Brow was opposed by Ald. Moss, Ald. Stewart and Ald. Peters.

Mr. Brow's salary will be $700 per month, the same as his earlier salary.

After the council meeting, Mr. Brow said he expects to be back at work by the first of next month. He said work on seven or eight programs, however, must begin immediately.

More relieved than jubilant at the decision, the recreation man described his interregnum as "four months of real nightmare."

"I could have left Kelowna, but my home and family are here. Besides, I wasn't going to leave until they told me what I did wrong," he explained.

Mr. Brow was kept on the city payroll from August until December.

Asked about the charges of possible trouble with a new parks and recreation director, he said, "I'm going to work with him as easy as heck."

"The man they're going to hire will be a qualified recreation director; he'll understand what I'm doing, and I'll understand what he wants."

He said he is facing the job of "startling all over again."

"Things have really dropped down; there's 10 years of work gone down the drain."

The recreation programs need a lot of work, he said, especially the physical fitness program.

"Besides, I'm getting fat, too."

officer. Dr. R. D. Mitchell was sworn in as legion padre, with Sgt.-at-arms being Jeffrey Swift, executive members installed were A. Gove, Robert Springer, Felix Menu, Charles Egan and Dick Rolke. New members sworn in were John Grant and Harry Palichuck, both of Peachland.

LADIES

Installed as president of the ladies auxiliary was Mrs. Margaret Oltmans, with Mrs. Wes Dunkin as vice-president, Mrs. A. Gove as secretary and Mrs. Douglas McLaughlin as treasurer. Sgt.-at-arms was Mrs. A. Coldham, with executive members Mrs. George Swartz, Mrs. R. Doren and Mrs. J. R. Davies.

The ceremonies were attended by more than 80 members and guests, including branches from South Okanagan and the Similkameen zone and representation from Summerland, Penticton, Oliver and Osoyoos.

Efforts of the 1969 executive were officially recognized by retiring branch president J. G. Sanderson, who noted improved attendance at meetings in the past few months and also lauded members of the ladies auxiliary without whom "many aspects of legion work would not run smoothly." He cited the installation proceedings as an example.

Incoming ladies auxiliary president, Mrs. Oltmans, stressed the need for greater membership participation, and asked for full co-operation in the coming year in lieu of changes brought about by expansion of the district. She told the meeting "this could be the year of many changes." A vote of thanks was also expressed to zone officers for their officiating and participation during the evening, which concluded with a dance.

Specify Offences Judge Demands In Military Case

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — A military judge ruled today that the government must disclose whether it intends to prove that Lt. William L. Calley Jr., per sonally killed Vietnamese civilians in the alleged My Lai massacre or that he ordered others to kill them.

The judge, Lt.-Col. Reid W. Kennedy, also declared that the government must turn over to Calley's defence lawyers any copies of expected testimony the defence does not now have.

Calley, 26, of Miami, is charged with murder in the slaying of 102 civilians at My Lai in March, 1968.

No date has been set for a trial.

In his action today, Kennedy confirmed his order at a Jan. 20 pretrial hearing that the government must specify how many separate and distinct offences Calley is charged with.

The judge confirmed his ruling also that a motion pertaining to multiplicity of charges against Calley was resolved at the Jan. 20 hearing.

At this hearing, dismissal of two specifications reduced the number of persons killed to 102 from 109. Lawyers said the seven victims probably are included in two other specifications.

Crew Of 'Dunked' Balloon Undaunted But Bit 'Goofy'

HOLYHEAD, Wales (CP) — The Pride of Thunder Bay wound up in the drink Monday, but the two-man crew of the hot-air balloon remains undaunted.

"We're pretty rugged characters," Norman Jones of Montreal said after he and Capt. Ray Munro of Lancaster, Ont., were plucked from the chilly Irish Sea. "We're also a bit goofy."

Jones said he is ready to launch another attempt to pilot the Pride of Thunder Bay, named after Canada's newest city, across the Irish Sea to Wales.

Munro, resting up from a combination of exposure and salt-water intake, wasn't available for comment.

The two Canadians were forced to bring down their wind-buffed balloon prematurely on Monday's try at soaring from Wicklow, Ireland.
